

CONTENTS

CPN editors-----	43
Do bears disperse Darlingtonia ?-----	44
The intricate Pinguicula crystallina/hirtiflora -complex-----	48
Prey capture patterns in Nepenthes species and natural hybrids – are the pitchers of hybrids as effective at trapping prey as those of their parents?-----	62
Germinating Nepenthes seed: Putting myths to rest-----	80
Resolution of the relationships within the North American pitcher plant genus, Sarracenia -----	82
Cultivation of Australian aquatic insectivorous plants-----	85
Giant Cephalotus of unknown origins-----	90
New cultivars-----	93
Carnivorous plant cultivar names registered in 2014-----	95
Grex names published by the International Nepenthes Grex Registry-----	96

CPN EDITORS

In April 1972, Don Schnell and Joe Mazrimas worked together to release the first Carnivorous Plant Newsletter – a 15-page mimeograph. In 1978, they were joined by Leo Song and Larry Mellichamp and some color pages were added.

In 1997, editorial leadership shifted to Barry Rice and Jan Schlauer. Steve Baker conducted the page layout. In 2009, Stephen Davis took over the role of managing editor. In 2010, Bob Ziemer became managing editor with assistance from Barry Rice, Jan Schlauer, and Fernando Rivadavia. In 2014, Djoni Crawford joined the editorial staff. The entire staff works on a volunteer basis.

On July 19, 2014, five of CPN's past and present editors attended the annual BBQ hosted by California Carnivores: (from left) Bob Ziemer, Barry Rice, Leo Song, Steven Davis, and Joe Mazrimas.

Editors	Tenure
Joe Mazrimas	1972-1998
Don Schnell	1972-1996
Leo Song	1978-1993
Larry Mellichamp	1978-1987
Steve Baker	1994-2008
Barry Rice	1997-2015
Jan Schlauer	1997-2015
Tony Gridley	2009
Steven Davis	2009-2010
Bob Ziemer	2009-2015
Fernando Rivadavia	2009-2015
Djoni Crawford	2014-2015

